

My Brother's Words of Wisdom...

A life-altering accident at work left me completely blind and with no sense of taste or smell. Some people might bemoan their lot in life if something that disastrous ever happened to them. I could not. After six short weeks of recovery I realized I needed to move on and move ahead. I had always been mechanically inclined, and was amazed to realize I could still effectively recognize and use my tools. I used those attributes combined with my love of cars and I got to work.

In time, my lifelong dream of running a professional race car team no longer seemed unreachable. When I told my brother my plan, he said, "You really should concentrate on putting your life back together. You've only been blind for a year and a half." Jim's words were all the impetus I needed. He had my best interests at heart, but I would not be discouraged. That's how Follow A Dream started. I learned I was capable. I caught the details others missed with sight. And I proved I could put together a winning race team.

Many businesses and professionals, students, military, and others have heard the story of my success and been inspired by it. Many more could benefit by hearing it. My Follow A Dream message motivates others to keep fear from driving their decisions or pursuing their life's dreams. I feel it's an important message. Are you looking to inspire and motivate teams, staff, or members of your business or organization? I would love to help.
